Design.

For our Oxted project, the client requested the replacement of all internal doors on the ground floor with our InoCross20 hinged doors. This involved the installation of four single doors, one single door with an overpanel, and the addition of a sliding door with a side screen to create a distinct office area within the property.

To create the office space, the client selected our Cross Bar sliding door with side screen due to its proximity to the front entrance door of the property. Our InoCross20 single sliding door was the ideal solution for the space, as it requires no swing area, occupying minimal room when both open and closed. The door created a separate office area for the client while allowing natural light to flow in, which helps boost productivity and creativity.

Hallway offices have become increasingly popular in recent months, as more people work from home. Our sliding door enables you to create a stylish and functional divide between work and leisure while maintaining a connection to your home.

The four single doors and one single door with an overpanel in this project replaced existing timber doors. The client's carpenter removed these doors before our survey, along with the timber stop beads within the door frame. The original notches in the timber door frame, where the previous hinges were housed, were also filled to produce a seamless finish.

BEFORE

The client for our Oxted project had always admired the aesthetic of Cross Bar doors. Though wooden alternatives were already in place, they chose to invest in our bespoke steel Cross Bar doors for their property.

The unique character of the property was reflected in the art and photographs adorning its walls. Given their existing doors and style preferences, the client knew precisely what Cross Bar design they wanted. They opted for three horizontal bars on each of the single doors and one vertical bar per panel on the sliding door with a fixed side screen.

For the W/C door, the use of opaque glass was a perfect solution. Our doors complemented the property's contemporary ambiance beautifully, providing the perfect finishing touch to the space.

AFTER

The Oxted project serves as a testament to the significant impact our Cross Bar doors can have on a space. The transparent glass panels create a sense of continuity, even when the doors are closed, allowing natural light to permeate through while also serving as an excellent acoustic barrier between rooms.
